

SUPRA[®] Cables

MADE IN SWEDEN

Supra has been manufacturing cables, in-house from their facilities in Sweden, since 1976. Prior to 1976, cables had no identity, they were just "cables". In 1976 Supra introduced the "Supra 2.5", beginning a new trend in branded cables.

Supra has since greatly expanded their lines, creating new cables for each new trend in the audio industry. We invite you to visit the Supra web site for more information, or download the Supra catalog from our web site: www.jenving.se in Sweden.

The Lorad power cables are very popular, providing a shielded connection to the wall outlet. The MD06-US/SP power strip is also shielded and has no stray fields. The MD06-US/SP has a 3-way surge protection circuit.

The Supra Classic and Rondo cables are used for both internal and external wiring. The shielded version is more often used for external wiring, reducing the effects of stray field noise.

Sword cables are made with bifilar litz winding, where an inner set of helically wound wire is run in one direction and an outer set in another direction. This divides the fields in opposing directions, cancelling the magnet field. Sword behaves as a non-inductive and phase stable cable. Sword cables come with interchangeable CombiCon connectors, providing both spade and banana termination.

Supra EFF is one of our best analogue interconnects. Multi test winner and our most sold interconnect. EFF comes terminated with the PPSL RCA plug or XLR plug.

Trico is a 75 Ohm double screened coaxial interconnect cable for digital/ video signals.

Tin vs Silver, Supra cables are plated with a high purity Tin instead of Silver. Tin is of a higher resistance than Silver, so the signal travels through the copper and not on the plating. Tin also has a minimized dielectric effect by acting as a semi-Litz.
